For this reason, everything in our lives is changed because of the Resurrection of Jesus Christ: the way we pray, our posture in Church, the Church building itself, everything

PASCHA: THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST!

John 1: 1-17

PASCHA

The iconography of the Byzantine Church does not dare attempt to depict the Resurrection of Christ. Iconography can only portray what Scripture describes of God's self-revelation and none of the four Gospels offers a description of how Jesus rose from the dead. The scriptural accounts of the Resurrection can do no more than invite us to faith in the risen Lord. Two elements in the Gospel accounts make that invitation: the sign of the empty tomb and the testimony of witnesses. All the Gospel accounts agree in reporting that the myrrh-bearers discovered our Lord's tomb empty in the early hours of the first day of the week (Matthew 28, 1-10; Mark 16, 1-11; Luke 24, 1-12; John 20, 1. 11-13). This in itself is no proof of the Resurrection, however. The Jews presume (Matthew 27, 62-66; 28, 11-15) and even Mary Magdalene (John 20, 15) initially suggests that Jesus' body had been stolen. The myrrh-bearing women and the Apostles leave the tomb confused and doubtful. The empty tomb is, therefore, no proof that Jesus rose from the dead.

Still, viewed with faith, it becomes a sign that Christ has indeed risen as He foretold. Whence comes the faith that makes this possible? According to the Gospels, its source is an experience of the continued presence of the risen Christ on earth or a flash of understanding wherein one realizes how Jesus' Resurrection fulfills God's plans and promises as set out in the Old Testament. Mary Magdalene (John 20, 11-18), the Apostles in the upper room, and the disciples on the road to Emmaus (Luke 24, 27ff) all encounter the risen Christ in just this manner. Much later, St. Paul would encounter Him on the road to Damascus (Acts 9, 1-6). At Emmaus and in the upper room (Luke 24, 44-47) Jesus helped His disciples to understand the Scriptures and so come to recognize how the Resurrection fit into God's plan.

The Gospels are not shy in relating that the disciples' doubts melted very slowly. Once assured, however, their personal encounter with the risen Lord expressed itself in a desire to share the good news with others. The angel at the tomb had told the myrrh-bearing women "Go announce to His disciples" (see Matthew 28, 7; Mark 16, 7). Christ Himself commands the Apostles, "You must be my witnesses" (Luke 24/48). It is no coincidence that our own Resurrection Matins focus our attention on the empty tomb and repeat again and again the joyful message of the Resurrection: "Christ is risen from the dead."

Our Liturgy invites us to experience the Resurrection just as the Apostles did. Thus, we can actually pray, "Now that we have seen the Resurrection of Christ..." for indeed, we have. We can and should come away from Resurrection Matins eager witnesses to the Resurrection, just as the Apostles were. Our tradition encourages us to witness by proclaiming the good news "Christ is risen" "Indeed He is risen!" in our daily lives and ordinary conversations. We would be all the poorer were we to lose this very biblical greeting, or to replace a Gospel proclamation with the bland, commercialized, non-sectarian and profoundly meaningless, "Happy Easter." Such a greeting suffices for those whose holiday consists of bunnies and chocolates, eggs and lilies. The Gospel proposes for us a very different Easter: the empty tomb, the risen Lord, the Scriptures fulfilled, the joyful message passed along until it fills the whole created world with the promise of new life. For we are not mere spectators at an Easter parade. We are witnesses of – participants in – the Resurrection itself.
